Cupid and Croesus.

By Constance D'Arcy Mackay.

Copyright, 1907, by Mary McKeon.

"But the trouble with being rich is that you never know whether any one is in love with you or not" mourned Rosamond Maythorn, stretching out a daintily slippered foot to the fender, where a bright fire gleamed.

Her father's eyes twinkled. "I think I have heard that phrase before, my dear," he said kindly, "and, while I acknowledge that your fortune is a good deal of a lure, I must confess that if I were a young man just the sight of your eyes and the sound of your voice would be enough for me."

Rosamond shook her head. "You see, father, you were an exceptional young man," she said, but the look in her eyes was troubled, and a faint pucker showed between her brows. Her father leaned forward and patted the slim young hand that lay on the carved arm of the chair. His motherless daughter was very dear to him.

"What's gone wrong, Rosamond?" he queried. "Is the new Worth gown a failure, or didn't you enjoy your dance last night, or is the world generally stuffed with sawdust?"

"It isn't the world that's stuffed with sawdust; it's the men!" cried Rosamond.

Her father laughed outright, and Rosamond frowned at him with delicious severity.

"Ah, you may laugh," she said, "but I'm in earnest just the same. I'm sick of all men I see at balls and operas. I don't want a puppet in evening dress to talk to. I want a man—a man who works and thinks and feels—and in this silly social whirl I've not been able to find one. Besides, there's not one of them that's not a fortune hunter, from Toby Lapman to George Astorgilt. The fact is, I'm beginning to tire of utterly vapid days and a pleasure seeking existence."

"What do you intend to do, then?"

"I propose to work for my living."

"Seriously, Rosamond?"

"Doesn't this look serious?" She drew from the floor beside her a writing pad covered with cabalistic signs.

"Shorthand, as I live!" ejaculated her father. "Well, Rosamond, I've always let you have your own way, and if you want to make an experiment go on. I won't hinder you. I suppose in a month or two you'll be applying for a situation in my office."

"YOU LIVE HERE?" HE INTERROGATED.

"Nothing of the kind!" she flashed. "I'll find a situation of my own. I'll cease to be Rosamond Maythorn. Tomorrow morning I'll be Rosamond Marsh, and if you expect to catch a glimpse of me you'll have to be up early, for I'm off to my business college at 8 o'clock."

There followed days when Rosamond was utterly fatigued and disheartened. Many a time she hovered on the verge of giving up her course and going back to her butterfly existence, but the same vital energy that made her father a power in Wall street was latent in her, too, and she stuck it out courageously, though often the penciled letters swam before her eyes, her back ached, and her fingers almost refused to "clack" at the type of her machine. To a girl accustomed to waking at 10 in the morning it was no small wrench to put back the hands of the clock to 7 a. m. as a rising hour and instead of luncheon in a well appointed dining room to scurry to a restaurant for a hurried midday meal.

"My, isn't it fine to think that our course is nearly finished!" sighed Matty Brown, a trim girl in black, busily engaged in putting on her hat before a small mirror which hung in the cloakroom. "I suppose we'll be hunting for work next. Wonder if we'll soon get any?"

"I hope so," said Rosamond soberly. The hundreds and hundreds of toilers whom she passed in the streets each night after the 5 o'clock whistles blew had given her a very different view of life from that which she had cherished in her brocaded boudoir. She knew now that it was composed of infinite struggle and hardship, and it was with a thrill of thankfulness that she found herself singled out from a dozen applicants to be the stenographer of Graham Ellis, a young lawyer of whom great things were prophesied.

From the first Rosamond liked him. He was kind and courteous—never too hurried to be polite, never more exacting than the occasion required. His sincerity and straightforwardness spoke not only in his frank and genial manner, but in every direct glance of his steady gray eyes, every motion of his well poised head.

"Tired?" said Rufus Maythorn a few months later, looking at his daughter across the dinner table that sparkled with silver and cut glass.

"Not a bit," she answered cheerfully.

"And you still like your employer?"

"He seems," said Rosamond demurely, "to be a very just and reasonable sort of person."

"The people who know him say fine things of him," returned her father. "I should judge that he was composed of brain and muscle rather than of sawdust."

One evening after office hours, as Rosamond was walking homeward, Graham Ellis joined her. She had played so long on the dangerous edge of discovery that she had become accustomed to it, but on this particular night his sudden presence startled her, and to gain time she turned into a shabby side street. A girl was just disappearing into one of the dingy doorways. It was Matty Brown. Instantly Rosamond saw a way of escape.

"Good night," she said, pausing and abruptly holding out her hand to Graham Ellis.

"You live here?" he interrogated.

A little demon of mischief looked out of Rosamond's brown eyes.

"Why not?" she queried lightly, already halfway up the steps.

"May I come and see you some time when you're not too tired or busy?" he asked.

"I should be delighted," smiled Rosamond and then slipped into the dimly lighted hall, where the figure of Matty Brown was slowly receding. Here she waited till she knew that Graham Ellis had passed and then went out again, her heart beating more than it had ever done over a social triumph. Poor and dismal and dingy though the place was, he had cared enough to come and see her in it, while the men she was accustomed to meet in the drawing rooms of her friends would have sneered and passed on.

"I must have made a mistake in the number, Miss Marsh," he said to her the following week. "Was it 15 or 17? I rang at several doors, but no one seemed to know your name."

"We've moved," said Rosamond calmly. "We don't live there any more."

"Oh, I see," said Graham Ellis. There was a long pause. "Of course," he began rather stiffly—"of course if you don't care to have me call"—

Rosamond bent over her machine. "I don't know when you've seen where I live if you'll like it," she murmured, and Ellis was too much in earnest to note the catch of amusement in her tone.

"Like it!" he cried. "Of course I'll like it! Do you think it makes any difference to me where you live? Surely we can't have worked together all these months without your knowing that I love you!"

"Ah," said Rosamond, with a ripple of whimsical laughter, "then if nothing makes any difference, you won't mind my being Rufus Maythorn's daughter instead of Rosamond Marsh, for, you know, there was once an ancient who set out with a lantern to look for an honest man; but, since I'm a modern, I've used a typewriter instead. And it led me straight to you."

"To a man with nothing on earth to offer you but love!"

"Well, isn't that the greatest thing in the world?" she whispered, flushing adorably.

Her References.

Not long ago a Philadelphia lady was suddenly deserted by the cook and advertised for another, stipulating that applicants must furnish good references. A middle-aged colored woman was among those who sought the place, and when asked for her references she said, "'Deed, Ah done tore up dem references, lady." "Don't you know," the lady asked, "that if you don't bring any references with you people will suspect that you are not a good servant? I am surprised that you should destroy the references a former employer was kind enough to give you." "Yassum; maybe dat's so," the applicant replied. "Folks can 'spect Ah ain't er good servant, but yo'd know Ah was crazy ef Ah'd brung dem references." — Philadelphia Record.

Very Useful.

"He's a very good horse, but thin," remarked the dealer who was trying to sell the animal. "I sometimes have to tie a knot in his tail to prevent him from slipping through his collar. But that's no matter. Occasionally, too, I have to hang a sack over him to keep the hay inside of him from getting sunburned. He's a good horse, but thin. My wife and her mother took him for a drive the other day, and they foolishly let him trot. When he trotted the rattling of his bones so startled him that he bolted, pitched my wife and mother-in-law out and killed the old woman. Oh, he's a good horse if thin, but he's very useful."—Liverpool Mercury.

Two Reasons Why.

A government officer recently returned to Washington after an absence of some years abroad. He met an old friend who had been interested in flying machines and asked:

"Well, professor, how are you getting along with your aerial machine?"

"It is not yet a complete success," the professor said, with a sad smile. "I have two things to accomplish before I can say that it is."

"What are they?"

"I must discover how to get my machine in the air and then how to keep it there."—Success.

A Breach of Confidence.

[Original.]

Why her father and mother didn't give her the name of Mephistophelia instead of Jaqueline I can't imagine. They certainly would have done so had they known how she was to turn out. As it is, nobody ever calls her anything but Jack, and in speaking of her to those who have never seen or known her one necessarily conveys the idea that she is a boy—not only a boy, but a boy of the worst kind.

The way she has treated me and her sister certainly deserves a hundred lashes, and I would like to be the fellow to lay them on. I have always been taught to consider one who would betray a confidence as worse than a thief. Jack betrayed our confidence in the most unblushing manner. It all happened only yesterday, and perhaps I'm not in a condition to look upon her act with charity. I hope I'll never come into a frame of mind to excuse her abominable treachery.

It was this way: Mr. Merryman wanted his daughter—his eldest daughter, Harriet—to marry some big gun. He had no objection to me other than that I was neither president, member of the cabinet nor one of the justices of the United States supreme court. Harriet had tried to get his consent to marry me, but he always put her off by saying, "What do you want to marry a man for who couldn't even set a small rivulet afire, let alone a river?" Then Harriet would expatiate on my good sense, good heart and a good many other things that big guns don't generally possess, especially the good heart, for they are usually diabolically selfish. But her father only laughed at her.

How we ever came to take Jack into our confidence when we came to an agreement to elope I don't know. Harriet thought she couldn't make her preparations without Jack's knowing of them, but I rather put it down to the fact that she must tell some one. At any rate, she told her. Jack clapped her hands, and her eyes glistened with glee. An elopement! How romantic! Just too lovely for anything! She'd help us all she could, and, as for keeping the secret, it would be buried away down in her guileless heart.

We didn't need anything especially elaborate—no rope ladder, fast team, and all that. We concluded just to board a train, go up the road some thirty miles to where a former family dominie, Mr. Strickland, lived and get him to marry us. We would go in the morning, take the afternoon train back and be forgiven in time for dinner. Of course I engaged the parson for a specified day and hour. Jack was intensely interested in it all and made us give her every detail, promising to prepare her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Merryman, for what was to come, so that it wouldn't be so much of a shock.

Harriet met me in the open square near the station. She was trembling all over, but I reassured her. To avoid observation we went to where the foremost car would stand on the track when the train came in. We got away on time and had the satisfaction to be in a car that was nearly empty. The train stopped at the next station on the road a mile beyond. There the door opened, and I heard a familiar girl's voice say: "Come in here. There's lots of room in this car."

I turned with a rubadub heart to see—whom do you suppose? Jack beckoning to her father and mother, who were mounting to the car platform. There they all three bustled into the car we were in, Jack exclaiming:

"Goodness gracious, if there isn't Hat! And, I declare, Ben too! Where in the world are you two going?"

The astonishment of the father and mother was very much overdone. It didn't deceive either of us. I glanced at Jack and avoided meeting the eyes of the parents. Mr. Merryman seemed overjoyed that our parties should have met on what he called an improvised excursion. He asked me where we were going, and it was no use to lie, for my ticket would give me away. So I told him, and he was delighted that we were all going to the same place.

Of the two halves of the party one was jubilant, the other mad and mortified. We were obliged to spend an hour and a half in this way before reaching our destination. There we all got out, and Jack proposed a stroll. She walked with her father, while her mother walked with us. The little villain led the way to the parsonage, stopped before the door and proposed a call on the parson. Without waiting for consent, she rang the bell, and we all went in. The parson was expecting us, but since I had told him we would be alone he was a trifle surprised.

"This would be a good time for you and Hat to get spliced," said Jack to me.

The dominie got his book and waited for us to take position. What could we do? I didn't know what Mr. Merryman was going to do, but since he made no move I took Harriet before the clergyman, and we were married. Mr. and Mrs. Merryman came up, gave me a hand and embraced their daughter. Harriet didn't know whether to burst into tears at having had her confidence so abused or to rejoice that she did not have to go back and ask her parents' forgiveness.

When Mr. Merryman put a check for $10,000 in her hand, joy triumphed.

We took the afternoon train back reaching home in time for a hasty meal, after which our most intimate friends came pouring in for a wedding reception. They had been invited previously.

THE WORST CLIMATES.

Three Places Where Weather Conditions Are Unbearable.

"Speaking of rank climates," said a globe trotter, "I have experienced the three worst.

"Of these three unspeakable climates I give the palm to the strait of Magellan. There is rain on an average 250 days in the year. The wind blows a hurricane from January to December. The thermometer never rises much above the freezing point—a year round of raw, bitter days of rain and snow.

"Next comes Sierra Leone, on the African west coast. That low lying marshy region has an average temperature of 81 degrees, and the annual rainfall is 189 inches—enormous! There are, too, the 'smokes.' These are mists, smelling like oyster mud, that rise continually from the marshes, giving marsh fever to nine out of ten of the white men that breathe them—a year round of hot and sticky days, with vile smelling clouds of mist and whirring clouds of mosquitoes.

"Last come the high tablelands of central Asia, where the lack of moisture in the air makes the days Saharan and the nights arctic—days like a redhot furnace, nights like a January blizzard. Before this range of temperature no human constitution can stand up."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE ZOO CATERER.

Special Knowledge Required to Run a Wild Animals' Hotel.

"To run a wild animals' hotel—for what is a zoo but that?—requires a lot of special knowledge," said an animal keeper. "How would you, for instance, know how to provide for a rhinoceros or a tapir? If you don't cater right for your animal guests, if you don't give them what they want, they pack up and quit the hotel, you know—that is to say, they die. It amounts to the same thing.

"Yes, it takes special knowledge to feed a zoo. You wouldn't know, would you, that an elephant requires 150 pounds daily — no more, no less — of rice, hay, straw, roots, bread and biscuit?

"A hippo wants more. Give him roots, hay and grass, 200 pounds of them, and he won't register a single kick.

"A giraffe with its dainty appetite, asks only for fifty pounds a day of chaff, salad, grain and clover.

"But don't offer vegetables to lions and tigers. Eight pounds apiece of raw horseflesh, with plenty of bone and gristle, is their ration, year in and year out.

"We have our farms, too, to supply our table, just as lots of other hotels do. Only our farms are queer ones. One is a mouse farm. In it, with the help of traps, we raise a tremendous annual crop. Another is a worm farm, where we produce yellow meal worms by the thousand for our birds."—Exchange.

Marie Antoinette's Books.

The unhappy Queen Marie Antoinette possessed an important library of 4,712 volumes, consisting of plays and romances, little books a la mode, the works of Pascal, Bossuet, Fenelon, Bourdaloue, Massillon, Bolleau, Cousseau, Cornelle, Molere, Voltaire and many others. She loved music passionately and had a large collection of operas in eighty-nine numbers. The bindings were by Biziot and were uniform in red morocco, with the arms of France and Austria stamped upon them. The execution of the work was poor and the decadence in the art of binding evident. The glories of the art of Padeloup and the Deromes had passed away, and the revolution effectually killed whatever knowledge remained of the ancient skill of the bookbinders. Half a century later saw its revival in France, and the art has since flourished both there and on English soil.—London Spectator.

Legislative Representatives And The Grangers.

Glen Ellen Grange has been receiving lots of press notices because of the fearless tone of the resolutions framed in regard to extravagances in the Legislature this year. The intrepid expression of sentiment and the tenacity with which the Grangers adhere to it has caused a ripple of excitement in this part of the State. It is quite evident that the Grange has backbone, and its outcry has made many sit up and take notice who heretofore knew little of the men belonging to that organization. As to the swapping of political favors we know that this is looked upon as a fair part of the political game. The Grangers, right enough, condemn the practice of such transactions, but when such conditions exist it is not within the power of two or three representatives to revolutionize things in one session. If organizations like the Grange, however, would campaign against this kind of politics and bring out candidates on this kind of a platform, men who would stand their ground when they arrived in medias res we might hope for better legislation.

The sociological side of the practice of swapping political favors has many aspects. Looking at it from one standpoint, we must concede that in principle it has all the elements of "give and take" and the fundamental idea of arbitration. Unfortunately it is a practice which cannot be applied to self-government without distortion and consequent corruption.

If we eliminate it and come to have no swaps whatever the sessions of the legislature, for instance, would undoubtedly be exciting. All hopes for anti-fighting bills would have to be abandoned. As a matter of fact the Granges have the right idea and although the mediation of the wrong may not be in the immediate present nor accomplished through the criticism of their contemporaries, Lincoln's maxim is re-echoed in their suggestions to our law makers, "Let us have faith that Right makes might, and in that faith let us dare to do our duty as we underseand it."

Gentle readers, women are to be perfected. If any human being is lacking in good qualities science will infuse good blood from the perfect ones in this world and we will come to have all the essentials of the original pattern. Since men are the models or perfect moulds, the discovery will be a great benefit to womankind for whom there is now some hope of growth. If your husband has long claimed to be perfect, steal a few drops of his blood and get the scientist to place it in your heart, and presto, you will have all the elements of that perfect being, man, within your veins. You will no longer be frivolous, gossipy, nervous or inconsistent but a whole encyclopæda of virtues, "noble in reason, infinite in faculty! in form and moving how express and admirable! in action how like an angel! in apprehension how like a god!

The divorce problem has been solved. A couple a century old is to be married—probability of divorce nominal.

Fruit Shippers Handicapped.

The fruit growers and shippers of Sonoma Valley are much disappointed in the new freight train time schedule which went into effect on the 1st inst. Take Vineburg as the shipping point for instance. Under the old time schedule freight trains arrived at that shipping point at 9 A. M., and departed for San Francisco at 5 P. M. This gave the shippers of fruit seven hours to get their shipments aboard the cars, which was very satisfactory to them. Under the new schedule freight trains arrive at that point at 11 A. M. and depart at 2 P. M., which, leaving the noon hour out, gives them but two hours in which to make their shipments. This, the shippers claim, will greatly handicap them in getting their produce to San Francisco in a marketable shape, and an effort will be made to get the railway officials to give our fruit men the old schedule in place of the new.

Galiano's Quinine Hair Tonic.

Joe Galiano, at First Street East, Pinell building, has introduced into Sonoma a hair tonic, called Quinine Tonic, which is a wonderful remedy for the prevention of baldness. Mr. Galiano has had many years experience under a first-class physician in Europe. A great number of cases of baldness are caused by indigestion, and not as is presumed, by a disease of the scalp. It is not claimed that Quinine Tonic will grow hair on a bald head, as a number of fake tonics are advertised to do, but it is claimed and guaranteed that Quinine Tonic will stop the hair from falling out, and if used twice a week will clear the head from dandruff which will not return as long as the Tonic is used. Quinine Tonic is composed of the five following articles: Pure Alcohol, Quinine, Sulphur, Glycerine and Tumeric. If the Tonic is used and not found as represented, Galiano will refund the money. The Quinine Tonic will also save the trouble of shampooing the hair. This Tonic is for sale at both drug stores in Sonoma.

Convent School Picnic.

The pupils and teachers of the Convent School had a most enjoyable outing last Wednesday. May Day, 1907, will long be remembered by all who took part in the picnic up in the Caliente hills. As had been previously arranged, the entire party met at the Convent at 9 o'clock and thence drove, amid cheers and shouts of glee, on towards Agua Caliente where Mrs. Richards, with her usual open-hearted hospitality, met and escorted the large assembly to a favorite nook in the foothills.

There, games of all kinds were indulged in, and at 11:30 a most delightful luncheon was partaken of. In the afternoon games were resumed, and at 4:30 the entire party repaired for home well pleased with the day's outing and loud in their praises of Mr. and Mrs. Richards, who so kindly threw open their hotel, grounds and springs for the enjoyment of the pupils of the Presentation Convent.

Prepare This Yourself.

For those who have any form of blood disorders; who want new, rich blood and plenty of it, try this:

Fluid Extract of Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon, one ounce; Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla, three ounces.

Shake well in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime. Any good pharmacy can supply the ingredients at small cost.

This prescription which, when made up, is called "The Vegetable Treatment;" by others the "Cyclone Blood Purifier." It acts gently and certainly does wonders for some people who are sickly, weak and out of sorts, and is known to relieve serious, long-standing cases of rheumatism and chronic backache quickly.

Make some up and try it.

HENRY GRUNDEL DIES ON RAILWAY TRAIN.

Was Well-Known in Sonoma Valley and Frequently Visited Here.

Henry Grundel, brother-in-law of George Bastian, former owner of the Sonama Grove resort one mile west of town, died on a Northwestern Pacific train just as it pulled into the Santa Rosa depot Tuesday afternoon.

The Press Democrat gives the following account of the sudden passing of deceased i

"Mr. Grundel, a victim of consumption, had been spending a week at Eagles' Nest on the Guerneville branch in the hope that the fresh country air might serve to prolong his life span just a bit. His condition became critical and his desire to get home so intense that the journey was undertaken Tuesday afteenoon.

When Santa Rosa was reached it was noticed that the life spark was about to flicker out. Dr. Bonar was hastily called by telephone, and when he arrived and boarded the car he at once pronounced life extinct. Then the poor wife's grief was inconsolable. She became hysterical and shrieked in her agony of heart. The two little children accompanying her cried bitterly and the scene caused many eyes to moisten.

Tenderly the remains were lifted from the train and were taken to the undertaking parlors of Lafferty & Smith. Mrs. Gundel and children were finally persuaded that it was the best for them to proceed to Petaluma where relatives reside. They did so, accompanied by a brother-in-law of the deceased, Charles Meineche. The deceased was thirty-nine years of age, and credit man in the retail department of Sloan & Co.'s big establishment in the metropolis.

The stone cutters and masons employed on the new City Hall went out on a strike Wednesday last, and work on the building ceased. The men demanded $6 a day instead of $5 which they had been receiving. Many Trout Were Caught.

The various trout streams in this valley were invaded this week by local fishermen and all reported fair catches. James Wratten, the well known poultry keeper, lost two hundred young chicks recently. Rats killed them, sucked the blood from the necks and piled them in heaps.

Beekeeper Youngman sent a few hives to Napa county recently by railroad. One of the covers got off at the junction and the gentle amber honey gatherers made it lively for the boys for a time.

The Dunbar Club met at the Mervyn Hotel Saturday. Among the things considered was the matter of a burying ground for the district. The chair appointed Johnson, Lemoine, Woods, Wagner and Hill a committee to view suitable places and report.

Professor Hurman lectured in Mayflower Hall on the "Cure for Ignorance, Poverty and Crime." In appearance he looked something like Jefferson did in the character of Rip Van Winkle, and from the statements he made one could readily imagine he had been asleep for twenty-five years. His tirade against the Government and the the money kings created much merriment. He advocated printing billions in greenbacks and buying the land which would be doled out to the people.

David Walls, who recently died at his nome near Petaluma, left a will which has been filed for probate in the Superior Court of this county. No Pay For School Election Officers.

District Attorney Clarence Lea has handed out an opinion in regard to compensating school election officers. The opinion was written at the request of Auditor Pool, and holds that election officers appointed by School Trustees must serve without pay.

The opinion suggests that if it became impossible to hold an election by reason of the refusal to compensate election officers, that the County Superintendent could appoint trustees. Auditor Pool will refuse to audit claims for services rendered in this capacity.

Relief from Rheumatic Pains.

Among the troubles that beset mankind rheumatism is one of the most aggravating. "I suffered with it for over two years," says Mr. Rolland Curry, a patrolman of Key West, Fla. "Sometimes it settled in my knees and lamed me so I could hardly walk, at other times it would be in my feet and hands so I was incapacitated for duty. One night when I was in severe pain and lame from it my wife went to the drug store here and came back with a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. I was rubbed with it and found the pain had nearly gone during the night. I kept on using it for a little more than two weeks and found that it drove the rheumatism away. I have not had any trouble from that disease for over three months.

Love Behind The Counter.

[Original.]

The poet says, "All times are thine, O Death!" This is equally true of love-making. If a man is bent on telling a girl he loves her, there is no earthly power to stop him. The field of battle is not too noisy, nor is the churchyard too quiet. On land and on sea, at noon, at twilight, in the ballroom and in the death chamber lovers have wooed and will continue to woo so long as the human race is on the earth.

Johnny Bounce was a clerk in a department store in a large city. He sold goods from the men's underwear counter, which adjoined the department of ladies' hosiery. Johnny's place was on the right of the underwear, and on the left of the ladies' hosiery stood Lucy Crowfutt, a dainty blond, who from the moment she had taken her place there and had brought her robin's egg eyes to bear upon him had melted a way with them straight into the underwear clerk's heart. They had found opportunity to speak scattered sentences or fragments of sentences on bright days when the store was full of customers and to chat continuously on rainy days when the store was deserted, but in this chat there was no word of love. Love had been looked, but not spoken. Nevertheless, after several weeks of propinquity, the two young hearts had become welded.

Then came a new man at the glove counter, directly opposite the men's underwear and ladies' hosiery. He was Byronic in his appearance, especially his collar, which, if it was not cut in Byronic collar fashion, was equally ample. A mass of raven curls were tossed up on the top of his head, one of them falling down upon his forehead, nearly touching a hook nose. He had hardly taken his place before the floorwalker was obliged to admonish him to attend to his customers and keep his eyes off the little girl at the counter opposite.

Johnny Bounce was panic stricken. No woman is insensible to admiration, and the blue eyed beauty from the moment the clerk at the glove counter cast his flashing black eyes upon her threw up her hands—not in token of surrender, but to make sure her hair was properly adjusted. Johnny saw the admiring glance and its effect. He cursed himself for a fool that he had not secured the prize while there was no one at the glove counter except two commonplace middle aged men and an old maid. Now it might be too late. Not a moment was to be lost.

The morning was beautiful. The windows were full of spring goods. The wax ladies donned in the habiliments of the opening season seemed to smile more contentedly than usual. But this has nothing to do with an artistic setting for this romance, for within the store was crowded and, the weather being mild, overheated. Johnny Bounce's cheek glowed not only with the temperature of the building, but with anxiety. He was keeping one eye on some union suits he was showing to a customer, the other on the flashing eyed man opposite. The customer, not finding what he wanted, moved on. A lady to whom Miss Crowfutt had been showing stockings moved on at the same time. Johnny determined to seize the opportunity.

"Miss Crowfutt," he began, "do you know that it seems a very short time since you came into the place beside me, but it isn't. It's a month. That's long enough for me to find out a secret. I've found out— Blankets, sir? Sixth floor. Take the elevator. I've found out that if I don't— Woodenware? Basement. If I don't—I mean if you don't— Men's underwear? Right here. What size, sir? Thirty-two waist is too large for twenty-eight length. Undershirt thirty-four? Think you'll find thirty-six more satisfactory. No, the goods don't shrink, but thirty-six will be easier. Don't like the quality? They're all wool, sir. We haven't a better line in the house. Sorry I can't suit you. You'll find bath robes in the back of the store, four aisles that way."

As the man moved off a lady approached Miss Crowfutt's counter, and it was half an hour before the two were again free. Then Johnny sidled up to Lucy. This time he spoke from the heart.

"I'm nearly crazy."

"What's the matter with you? You'll find lace curtains over on that side, madam."

"That fellow opposite is rubbering you."

"Pshaw! Do you think I'd look at him? What size, madam? Lisle thread? We have—very fine articles. You'll find the advertised goods over there, sir. That'll fit you. Openwork? We haven't any of these in openwork."

The customer passed on and was succeeded by another. This time Miss Crowfutt made a sale, but the lady turned away for a moment to speak to a friend. Johnny whispered:

"Lucy, I love you awful. If you don't love me I'll go mad. Tell me, quick, before she turns. Will you?"

"Will I what?"

"Will you be my girl and marry me so I can know you belong to me and to nobody else?"

At that moment the lady turned. Lucy whispered the one word "Yes" then, tapping with her pencil on the counter, called:

"Cash!"

Poor children! They never dreamed that of the two final words spoken on that occasion, so important to both of them, the former would in time be relegated to the background, while the latter would thrust itself forward, confronting them every day of their lives. They had struck the keynotes of love before and after marriage.

How Beetles Defend Themselves.

Beetles have other defenses than their cuirass, such as nauseous or caustic liquids, which they expel on provocation, and, strange to say, certain beetles actually exude their blood, charged with noxious products. The practice is confined to the chrysomelidae, some of the timarchae and adamonia, the coccinelidae and the meloidae. The blood of the coccinelidae has a strong, disagreeable odor like that of the whole insect. That of the timarchae is odorless, but has an astringent flavor, and in the case of the Timarchae primelioides is venomous. The blood of the meloidae contains much cantharidine.

A Problem In Golf.

Two young ladies were making their first essay at golf. "Dear me," said the first young lady, "what shall I do now? My ball is in a hole." The second young lady took out a book of instructions. "Let me see," she said, turning the pages. "I presume you must now take a stick of the right shape and get it out." "Oh, yes, of course," said the first young woman. "See if you can find me a stick shaped like a dustpan and brush."

WOMEN OF HOLLAND.

Dutch Feminine Costumes Are Too Complex For Words.

The women's costume is a trifle too complex for verbal description, as feminine belongings usually are, but the white lace cap which covers the head from eyebrows to nape of neck and from ear to ear, curving out in rounded wings on each side of her cheeks, is always a conspicuous and inevitable portion of a woman's attire. It may possibly be that on Sunday this cap is a trifle whiter or stiffer or daintier than on week days, but the difference is not very apparent.

The ladies assure us there is a vast difference in the quality of the net and the amount of handiwork employed, but the lens made no special note of that. In shape and outline the camera finds great distinction between these caps and those of Katwyk or Marken or Bois le Duc, but between Sunday and Monday caps in Volendam it records none whatever. For the rest of the costume feminine Holland asks above all things apparently a very flat, narrow chest surmounting enormous hips, and Volendam is no exception to this fashion rule. The invariable black "best waist" of the elder women is usually brightened by a square yoke of lighter color and material, and the dark aprons or overskirt is topped by six inches or more of gay plaid or bright colored band worn over an underskirt of dull blue striped or black material and uncountable petticoats. About the throat a collar formed of many rows of heavy dark red coral beads is fastened by huge silver clasps, and the number of rows, the size and quality of the beads are matters for feminine pride. Long hair is not the glory of women in Holland, save perhaps at Marken. It is usually hidden and at Volendam is cut quite close and entirely covered by a tight fitting thick black silk cap concealed beneath the snowy white lace. The younger girls, from the tiniest toddler to the young meisje, old enough to wed, wear dresses and caps the exact counterpart of their grave mothers, no less full of skirt or narrow of chest, but much gayer in color. A group of tiny maidens in a stiff breeze on the dike resembles nothing more than a swarm of butterflies.—Florence Craig Albrecht in Scribner's.

Do You Love

your baby? You wonder why he cries. Buy a bottle of White's Cream Vermifuge and he will never cry Most babies have worms, and the mothers don't know it. White's Cream Vermifuge rids the child of worms and cleans out its system in a pleasant way. Every mother should keep a bottle of this medicine in the house. With it, fear need never enter her mind. Price 25c.

Good Words for Chamberlain's Cough Remedy.

People everywhere take pleasure in testifying to the good qualities of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. Mrs. Edward Phillips of Barclay, Md., writes: "I wish to tell you that I can recommend Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. My little girl Catherine, who is two years old, has been taking this remedy whenever she has had a cold since she was two months old. About a month ago I contracted a dreadful cold myself, but I took Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and was soon as well as ever." This remedy is for sale by L. S. Simmons.

$8.50 PUNCTURE-PROOF TIRES ONLY $4.80 PER PAIR

Regular Price $8.50 per pair. To Introduce We Will Sell You a Sample Pair for Only $4.80 NAILS, TACKS OR GLASS WON'T LET OUT THE AIR

(CASH WITH ORDER $4.50)

NO MORE TROUBLE FROM PUNCTURES.

Result of 15 years experience in tire making. No danger from THORNS, CACTUS, PINS, NAILS, TACKS or GLASS. Serious punctures, like intentional knife cuts, can be vulcanized like any other tire.

Two Hundred Thousand pairs now in actual use. Over Seventy-five Thousand pairs sold last year.

Notice the thick rubber tread "A" and puncture strips "B" and "D," also rim strip "E" to prevent rim cutting. This tire will outlast any other tire make—SOFT, ELASTIC and EASY RIDING.

DESCRIPTION: Made in all sizes. It is lively and easy riding, very durable and lined inside with a special quality of rubber, which never becomes porous and which closes up small punctures without allowing the air to escape. We have hundreds of letters from satisfied customers stating that their tires have only been pumped up once or twice in a whole season. They weigh no more than an ordinary tire, the puncture resisting qualities being given by several layers of thin, specially prepared fabric on the tread. That "Holding Back" sensation commonly felt when riding on asphalt or soft roads is overcome by the patent "Basket Weave" tread which prevents all air from being squeezed out between the tire and the road this overcoming all suction. The regular price of these tires is $8.50 per pair, but for advertising purposes we are making a special factory price to the rider of only $4.80 per pair. All orders shipped same day letter is received. We ship C.O.D. on approval. You do not pay a cent until you have examined and found them strictly as represented.

We will allow a cash discount of 5 per cent (thereby making the price $4.55 per pair) if you send FULL CASH WITH ORDER and enclose this advertisement. We will also send one nickel plated brass hand pump and two Sampson metal puncture closers on full paid orders (these metal puncture closers to be used in case of intentional knife cuts or heavy gashes). Tires to be returned at OUR expense if for any reason they are not satisfactory on examination.

We are perfectly reliable and money sent to us is as safe as in a bank. Ask your Postmaster, Banker, Express or Freight Agent or the Editor of this paper about us. If you order a pair of these tires, you will find that they will ride easier, run faster, wear better, last longer and look finer than any tire you have ever used or seen at any price. We know that you will be so well pleased that when you want a bicycle you will give us your order. We want you to send us a small trial order at once, hence this remarkable tire offer.

COASTER-BRAKES, built-up-wheels, saddles, pedals, parts and repairs, and everything in the bicycle line are sold by us at half the usual prices charged by dealers and repair men. Write for our big SUNDRY catalogue.

DO NOT WAIT but write us a postal today. DO NOT THINK OF BUYING a bicycle or a pair of tires from anyone until you know the new and wonderful offers we are making. It only costs a postal to learn everything. Write it NOW.
